

NATIONAL BANDANNA DAY FACT FILE

National Bandanna Day is CanTeen's primary fundraising event. Through the sale of bandannas CanTeen is able to provide unique and specialised support services to young people that are living with cancer.

So what does selling bandannas actually mean?

- The sale of 50 bandannas allows four young people to attend a CanTeen Recreational Day. A Recreational Day gives our Members a chance to catch up with other Members and do something exciting like whale watching, surfing, bowling or going to the footy.
- The sale of 300 bandannas makes it possible for three young people to attend a weekend camp. This might be a Good Grief Program, where Members learn to recognise there is grief and loss associated with cancer, and learn some skills and strategies to deal with it.
- The sale of 600 bandannas enables three young people to attend a five-day Summer program. This is a great end of year camp where Members catch up with old friends and meet new people. This is usually the biggest camp of the year.
